

Narcissistic, non-achiever Oz PM kicked in teeth by Electorate

national / social/political / commentary

A swing of 7% against the government in the Gippsland by-election sends a clear and strong message to non-event PM, Kevin 'bereft' Rudd. The average swing against an incumbent government is around 4%; not only have the people kicked Rudd where it hurts but it looks like Rudd will be kicked right out of the Lodge before or after his first term -- a very dubious distinction for a Labor leader. Everyone except Rudd and his imbecile media advisers see the writing on the lavatory wall. FAILURE TO DELIVER and LACK of INTERVENTION where it is needed are the principal reasons the people voted overwhelmingly against the government.

It was clear from the start, the vain little prancer PM thought the nation would run itself while he indulged his pathological narcissistic personality. Rudd's failure to replace senior public servants promoted by the previous conservative leader is a critical mistake as is Rudd's inability to deal with every other major issue that has confronted him. In true bureaucratic fashion Rudd is attempting to delegate HIS job and RESPONSIBILITIES to public servants and his ministers. In the most bizarre demonstration of dissociation Rudd continues to prance while 'Rome' burns -- so much for his 'expert' consultants and media advisers!

Former Labor PM Paul Keating was correct in his assessment of Rudd's poll fixated advisers. The people have clearly proven the polls, and Rudd's advisers, WRONG! Polls up but Rudd down -- it should have been obvious to everyone, well, almost everyone!

Rudd now faces a long, hard haul when he could have intervened and managed from day one. I'm sorry too, Kevin, especially because it all amounted to NOTHING -- another summit anyone, perhaps a photo opportunity with daffy duck!

Frankly, Rudd is not worth criticising; I have better things to cover than this bereft failure. It should now be obvious to all, if he was capable he would have demonstrated it by now. The sad reality is what we have seen is all there is!

If the Labor Party had any sense they would remove this loser from office, the sooner the better. Negative fallout is better dealt with early in the term. Reality dictates the situation with Rudd as leader is beyond redemption! Care to leave him as leader and prove me wrong?

The only factor saving Rudd at present is the unpopularity of the 'air supremacy' opposition leader, Brendan 'super hornet' Nelson -- both major parties have been in dire need of major surgical intervention for some time.

The charade is over Kevin, go quietly or be openly removed -- that applies to you too, Brendan!

[You're getting old Rupert, backing Bush and Rudd proves you can no longer pick winners; give my regards to Wendi -- 'gei war chien!']
