

Bin Laden to the Rescue

by finch Thursday, Jan 19 2006, 3:34am

international / mass media / opinion/analysis

(The Straussian cat is out of the neo-con bag)

In a desperate attempt to retrieve the tatters that is the Bush government, Bin Laden has again come to the rescue – perfect timing! Who remembers the last major announcement from the person who has done more to assist Bush than any other man on the planet? It was during the last presidential election when Bush was in desperate need of an alarmist boost.

There are no coincidences in politics. There is not an analyst worth his opinion who doesn't have a smirk on his face at present. Which army, rebel group, murderer, etc would announce to an enemy that an attack is immanent? Give us all a break! Surely not even the most stupid yank would believe the latest ploy of the neo-con propaganda machine. It defies all reason and even the most simplistic intelligence may feel a little uncomfortable with the latest 'news'.

However, nothing issues from a vacuum and it is worth noting that the present absurd announcement is a clear indication that the Bush administration is desperate. Perhaps another performance from (uncle) Colin (tom) Powell may do the trick, you never can tell!

All criminals, whether insane or not, must be surrendered to the legal authorities. No one in any democratic nation is above the law.

The true strength of a nation is determined by the disposition of its people. Consider the present absurd and horrifying reality; a handful of murderers and psychopaths hold sway over the most powerful nation on the planet. Arrest the sociopathic Bush administration before they resort to another heinous act in an attempt to justify their rule.

Footnote:

For those who do not fully understand the sub-heading, simple research will provide a wealth of information. Spoon-feeding is for infants and the gullible.