

Life against death

by finch Saturday, Mar 18 2006, 3:27am

international / social equality/unity / article

The (coordinated) international protests and demonstrations against the war in Iraq indicate that people are unified in their fight against oppression, division, exploitation and violence. The way of the people is the way of peace, the majority decision is always for Peace, as the majority are aware that other options result in destruction if not annihilation. In contrast to the way of peace is the violence of the minority; the few that would wage war for the benefit of the few. It becomes plain to all, regardless of nationality, that ruling minorities are corrupt and do not serve the interests of the majority.

The war protests are an expression against minority rule and the inequity, injustice and violence associated with this type of social (dis)organisation. In fact, the anti-war demonstrations are a direct protest against those self-serving forces that would divide and create conflict in order to perpetuate their mode of rule. The people will not be deceived - it is Over!

A sustained and focused campaign at various Capitals around the globe is required to demonstrate to the world that the majority of people from various backgrounds have united in singular purpose to eliminate the corrupt rule of the few in their respective locales. Be assured in the knowledge that the few have never prevailed against the many. The decision, prerogative and power resides with the people as ONE and it is as ONE that these demonstrations are organised and REALISED.

The 'rules' of engagement are disengagement with the prevailing perpetrators of violent solutions and the withdrawal of the ideological subscription that sustains the minority in power - and be aware that it is the people who determine government regardless of political system. It has always been the people who have 'ruled', the difference today is that rule by proxy has failed and direct rule by the people IS begun. The elimination of self-serving violent minorities from ALL positions of influence is prerequisite to majority 'rule'. This strategy is to be realised by the withdrawal of support - there is nothing more devastating to existing power structures than disengagement, non-compliance and withdrawal of subscription.

Let the anti-war demonstrations and protests be seen as an expression of the affirmation of Life against death and let these demonstrations not cease until the blight is removed.

We are ONE

Peace.