

Failure of the Affluent State

by nano Monday, May 15 2006, 7:21am

international / social/political / commentary

When the State fails and criminals steal the reigns of power corruption filters through State institutions. The agencies and the regulatory 'authorities' usually 'toe the line' and therefore cannot be trusted to serve the interests of the people. When the government becomes a den of thieves, liars and murderers it is the people who must restore sanity and legitimate government.

It is not enough that the likes of Bush, Blair and Howard are deposed, they MUST be ARRESTED and put on trial for their crimes. The core members of these three regimes must stand trial and those found guilty punished to the full extent of the Law.

The most cunning of the three is Howard (the rodent). Howard sees the writing on the wall and is planning a 'graceful' hand-over of power and exit from politics while Bush and Blair are too full of themselves to know when to 'bite the capsule'. [However, unverified sources claim that Howard has been prevailed upon by the Bush camp to remain as leader of Australia for as long as possible.]

Regardless of the facade the 'coalition of willing' criminals wish to present to the public it is imperative that none of the core members of these three regimes is allowed to walk free. Ample Laws exist for the people to act in defence of the founding principles of their respective nations. [In an obvious effort to consolidate their criminal rule, these regimes have undertaken the most comprehensive revision of laws in the history of their nations.] The action of the people has always been the principal remedy against State corruption. Various groups are presently organising marches on their respective Capitals, assist in any way you are able.

The people are steadily altering course; the nefarious forces have lost balance and are in a defensive attitude - a portent of defeat. The ultra-right always overlooks the one force that becomes its nemesis. In the present era that was the conscience and 'voice' of the people manifest daily on the wire/internet.

The old men who rule were out of sync with the times and relied on antiquated methods in their attempts to dupe the public. The backlash of public opinion became a tidal wave of digital activity resulting in a media victory - or put more accurately, resulting in the Truth prevailing.

Media moguls do not as yet own the wire - a timely warning! Never allow the internet to become inaccessible to the masses. It has proven its worth as a medium of ultra-swift communication and an effective safety mechanism in democratic societies.

The days of deceptive government are drawing to a close. A medium that allows people to exchange information globally in an instant is the best guarantee that future leaders remain representative of the people.

When States fail the only sure remedy is the masses restoring sanity and legitimate government. Violent groups and cabals should never be given the opportunity to seize government.

March on your Capital and demand justice.

We are ONE.

Peace.

Cleaves Alternative News. <http://cleaves.lingama.net/news/story-214.html>