

Australia's leading Academic Advocate for a Carbon Tax - NOT qualified!

by nano Thursday, Mar 10 2011, 9:06pm

international / social/political / commentary

Professor Ross Garnaut has been leading the push for a carbon economy for some time, however, opposition Senator Nick Minchin revealed to the public that Garnaut is a Professor of ECONOMICS (what!) -- makes sense to me and carbon tax originators, GOLDMAN SACHS -- but it sure blows a hole in Garnaut's credibility on the issue.

Ross Garnaut, Economist

Garnaut pushes the scientifically refuted theory that man is the PRIMARY cause of climate change whereas EXPERTS IN THE FIELD, state clearly and emphatically that the SUN is the PRIMARY driver of climate on the earth. Well, who should we believe, 'economists' or specialist meteorologists, climatologists and astrophysicists - give Oz a break with the unqualified OPINION and flagrant CLIMATE PROPAGANDA, Ms Gillard, you despicable corporate lackey and Washington slave.

In an interview on Sky News Senator Minchin said that Professor Garnaut, is an economist and, "knows nothing about the climate." "He's not a climate scientist. I don't think he has any authority whatsoever to speak on the climate." he added.

What will Goldman Sachs and their trusty Carbon Tax facilitator, Julia Gillard, do now? The Australian people can only wonder what hair-brained scheme they will come up with next!

The CURE is to wipe the electorate clean of ALL Labor traitors and elect community representative INDEPENDENTS to office in STATE and FEDERAL arenas.

Unlike the moronic American public, the AUSTRALIAN PEOPLE are KEENLY aware of political REPRESENTATION or the LACK THEREOF!