The Australian Prime Minister, John Howard, has come out in support of a known public toilet loitering homosexual racist. Alan Jones, a controversial toilet loiterer and talkback radio host was recently found to be in breach of the broadcasting code. Another dubious and prominent character, John Singleton, known for his past links with Heroin importing former grade footballers and the CIA Nugan Hand Bank, has also expressed his support for the toilet-loitering, sexual deviant broadcaster. [I do not wish to labour a point but Jones was arrested and charged in London with two counts of "outraging public decency by behaving in an indecent manner under the Westminster by-laws".]

Howard and Jones

Jones was found to be in breach of the broadcasting code for referring to Middle Eastern youth as "scum" and "rapists" and contrasting the "Anglo-Saxon" community as somehow morally superior - the toilet-loitering, sexual deviant broadcaster obviously hasn't passed any mirrors lately! Ultra-conservative Evangelical and Catholic Christian leaders have not commented on the decision of the regulator (ACMA) to date, however, we expect to hear from all sections of the rabid right before the end of the day.

The message to enterprising and ambitious young (Anglo-Saxon) Australians is threefold, if you wish to succeed then homosexuality, racism, and dubious links with drug running CIA enterprises may be essential for upward social mobility (in a backward society).

The Prime Minister stated plainly that Alan Jones is an "outstanding broadcaster ... I don't think he's a person who encourages prejudice in the Australian community, not for one moment but he is a person who articulates what a lot of people think". The same was said about Pauline Hanson! Jones made his inflammatory comments just prior to the Cronulla race riots, the worst racist outbreak since the turn of the 20th century!

The interesting political aspect to the present embarrassing flurry is the support from the now unashamedly racist John Howard - his advisers and consultants have failed to inform him that 51% of today's Australian community is not of Anglo-Saxon background! Time for some new demographers in the faltering tower of Australian leadership; Howard could not have made a bigger mistake in an election year. Many European Aussies harbour bitter memories of their treatment in the 'South Africa' of the South Pacific.

Howard clearly hasn't learnt from the failure of his State counterpart in the recent NSW elections. The then leader of the conservatives launched his political campaign from Cronulla Leagues - and look what happened to him! The dotty leader of the opposition, Kevin Dudd, has been handed another gift; with the majority of the population not of Anglo-Saxon background any comments relating to race or any outward support of known racists would be considered politically inept.

We can hardly wait for Howard's next gaffe or for him to wake up to the fact that his advisers are deliberately undermining his chances at the next Federal election. The writing is on the (toilet) wall, John and Alan!

Alan Jones
