

WATER TORTURE: American DENIAL and PATHOLOGY

by finch Wednesday, Dec 19 2007, 8:52am

international / social/political / commentary

Debate rages in the US over the torture policies of the Bush regime and its many other criminal activities. Nevertheless, the House of Reps recently approved $70 billion for continuing war expenditure, which CLEARLY INDICATES THAT AMERICANS support the Bush regime's criminal activities.

Bush and his mass murdering, plundering handlers are very pleased with the result as are all the neo-psychopaths and high ranking agency officials. In order to highlight the criminality, psychopathology and servility of the nation we need not go any further than the debate over water torture, euphemistically called "waterboarding," in the US!

The debate is directly and easily resolved by DEMONSTRATION; those who support the use of waterboarding and claim that it is not torture need only demonstrate to the public that it is acceptable BY SUBJECTING THEMSELVES TO THIS HEINOUS PRACTICE! They would soon discover that 'waterboarding' is in fact applied, deliberate, slow drowning -- a most horrendous form of torture.

However, all debate, criticism and logic is lost on madmen and mad dogs; no one debates with mad dogs, they simply put them down for the good of the community.

All critical discourse, demos and 'soft methods' have proven ineffective to date, much to the delight of the criminals in power. Let's see if the American people are able to determine the most appropriate course of action in the circumstances!

It is extremely evident to the free world that the USA is irredeemable - a failing of the American people.

The civilised world can no longer afford the presence of a destructive, criminally insane nation. The time for debate is over - it is time to put the MAD DOG down!

[Who ever heard of debating whether torture is acceptable? The current 'waterboarding' debate is the clearest indicator that the nation is completely fucked!]