'What is this shit,' is a common exclamatory remark Aussies are apt to make when confronted with an obvious farce, fabrication, con or ruse? The latest criminal bungle of Australian occupation forces in Timor-Leste almost matches the effort of the Hilton bombing in '78 [see link.]

Ramos-Horta (left) and Reinado -- after recent jungle negotiations

[Former General] Peter Cosgrove -- the public face of Australia's operational security arm in the region -- made an astonishing and ill-advised appearance on the media after visiting Ramos-Horta, who remains comatose in a Darwin hospital! That effort was anxiously followed by our prancing PM, Kevin Rudd, who was advised to 'visit' the comatose Ramos-Horta in order to give the impression that Horta is conscious or somehow supports the latest escalation of foreign intervention in his tiny nation.

We note both the PM and Cosgrove are reluctant to discuss the 'lucid conversations' they had with President Ramos-Horta, who is conveniently kept in a medically induced coma. It may be time for the President's family and friends to intervene, the risk of drug induced 'memory loss' is not only a distinct possibility it may be a conscious intent; Ramos-Horta's recent approaches to Alfredo Reinado were vigorously opposed by western forces. Deals of an amnesty and re-integration into society were strongly opposed by all occupation forces.

Well, let's have it boys, you first Peter, what was the topic of conversation with a man in a vegetative state or at best in a state of drugged distraction? We would all like to hear his view on the shooting; surely you have some information you could share with a very curious public AND INTERNATIONAL COMMUNITY, you bumbling buffoon!

How about you Kevin -- you transparent poseur -- as PM you have a responsibility to the PEOPLE not the Oil interests who requested the removal of 'factors' that inhibited the expedition of oil production!

If Ramos-Horta emerges from his induced coma with memory loss or worse, variations in his passionate views on political issues – then stand exposed as the scurrilous, INCOMPETENT, MURDERING creatures that you are! Australia’s actions throughout this entire tragedy are completely transparent – please attempt to spin your way out of this one; we can hardly wait!
